

Evolve Digital Level 5 – English 5

Vocabulary summary

Unit 12, Lesson 1

Skill and performance

analytical (adj.) – examining or liking to examine things in detail, in order to discover more about them

"Sue was looking for a job where her analytical mind and extensive knowledge of sciences could be of use. She found the perfect one as an environmental data analyst."

artistic (adj.) – showing skill and imagination in creating things, especially in painting, drawing, etc.

"Kevin's mother has always known how artistic he was. So, when he was a teenager, she enrolled him in art classes, and he has been producing wonderful paintings since then."

athletic (adj.) – strong, healthy, and good at sports

"My father used to be a runner and a weightlifter when he was young. Now he is still very athletic and goes jogging every morning, but the only weights he lifts are my daughters – on his back..."

competent (adj.) – able to do something well

"She considered herself just a fairly competent cook, but her family and friends loved her food and thought she was an excellent one. So they finally convinced her to share her skills on a vlog."

determined (adj.) – wanting to do something very much and not allowing anyone or any difficulties to stop you

"To get to the top of that mountain, you have to be determined. There are some very steep climbs, and the temperatures are below freezing for most of the year. A lot of people give up."

gifted (adj.) – extremely intelligent or having a special ability, usually a natural one

"Some schools usually place their most gifted students in special classes. For example, some with special mechanical abilities and great talent for sciences often study robotics."

imaginative (adj.) – able to create new or interesting things and ideas

"Young children are usually so imaginative. They can think of ways to turn anything into a game."

intellectual (adj.) – (of people) interested in learning and in thinking about complicated ideas; (of things) using or relating to your ability to think and understand things, especially complicated ideas

"I think the most intellectual person I know is Marsha. Not only has she put together a fantastic library in our office, but she has also read all the books in it!"

logical (adj.) – using or guided by reason

"Dimitri is a very logical person. His thinking is very organized, and emotions don't really influence his decisions."

musical (adj.) – having a skill in or a great liking for music Jordan has always been very musical. He has enjoyed music since he was a baby and started playing his first instrument at a very young age.

skilled (adj.) – having the abilities needed to do an activity or job well

"He started as an apprentice at the repair workshop, but he soon became very skilled. He is highly respected in the music community for his careful work and attention to detail."

talented (adj.) – showing natural ability in a particular area; having a natural ability or skill

"There was a group of very talented jugglers performing at the beach today. In one of their numbers, they juggled clubs while riding a unicycle. It was pretty impressive."

technical (adj.) – relating to the knowledge, machines, or methods used in science and industry

"Ji-ha is computer programmer. It's a great job for her because she is a very technical person."

trained (adj.) – having been prepared for a particular job or activity, by learning skills, getting qualifications, etc.

"Most of the construction workers in our company are trained ones. Some have to go through up to 12 months of training and supervised practice before they are allowed to work on their own."

Unit 12, Lesson 2

Describing emotional impact

be a (real) downer (v. phr.) – to be an event or experience that makes you unhappy and lacking in hope, confidence, or energy

"We had been planning our weekend trip to the beach for months. So when it got cold and started to rain, it was a real downer. My daughter couldn't have been more disappointed."

brighten up something (phr. v.) – to make something or someone happy or hopeful

"The news of being promoted really brightened up Hector's day. After all those years working for the company, he was excited to move up."

capture somebody's imagination (v. phr.) – to make someone very interested and excited

A: Have you been reading all day?

B: Uh, yeah. I guess I have. I kind of lost track of time. This book really captured my imagination.

do somebody good (v. phr.) – to improve someone's health or life

"It did me good to join a choir. Not only has my singing improved significantly, but I have also made new friends and become a little more outgoing."

get somebody down (phr. v.) – to cause someone to feel unhappy and negative

"These cold days and long nights are really starting to get me down. I have to do something to avoid becoming depressed."

leave a lasting impression on somebody (v. phr.) – to have an (enduring/deep) effect or influence on the way someone feels or thinks

"Her first visit to the aquarium left a lasting impression on my niece. She became so interested in all things related to marine life that, when she went to college, she decided to study oceanography."

make somebody's day (v. phr.) – to make someone feel very happy

"I was feeling a little sad today, but then my boyfriend brought me these beautiful flowers and it really made my day."

put somebody's mind at rest (v. phr.) – to stop someone from worrying

A: You can put your mind at rest – they approved your project.

B: What a relief. It has been a very stressful week waiting for their decision.

raise somebody's spirits (v. phr.) – to make someone happier

"Claudia had been a little down lately. So, her friends decided to throw her a surprise birthday party to raise her spirits."

ruin somebody's day (v. phr.) – to cause someone's day to become a bad one

"I'd been looking forward to the barbecue for weeks. So, when I saw that I had burned the steaks, it just ruined my day."

stress somebody out (phr. v.) – to make someone feel very nervous and worried

"The difficult cases, the long hours, and the continuous pressure can often stress some nurses out. So, it is essential for them to find ways to relax at the end of their shifts."

take somebody's mind off something (v. phr.) – to stop someone from worrying or thinking about a problem or pain, often by forcing the person to think about other things

"Whenever Juan Carlos feels like his life is getting too stressful, he takes a day to go hiking and take his mind off everything."